PRESS RELEASE

Trench Entertainment is proud to announce the completion of their second short film “He Moved Through the Fair” produced in conjunction with Kerbute Productions. Shot on Location in Co. Laois across five days, the film is directed by Stradbally local John Hennessey from a script penned by himself and Martin Rochford. It tells the tale of Mick, played by Laois native Thomas Byrne, a disbeliever and a drunk who becomes embroiled in the affairs of the faerie folk. We follow Mick on his journey from our world into theirs and his encounters therein.

Filmed with two cameras He Moved Through The Fair promises to deliver an exciting short film fuelled with the richness of ancient Irish folklore.

Although produced by Trench Entertainment, the film secured most of its funding from generous contributors through Fundit.ie and was shot on a budget of €3000. This marks the second film produced by Trench Entertainment in partnership with Kerbute Productions

He Moved Through The Fair will première at the 24th Galway Film Fleadh in the New Irish Shorts Section before moving into the international festival circuit. The film stars Thomas Byrne, Jane Deasy, Kevin Lawlor, and Roxanne Byrne. It was directed by John Hennessey, Written by John Hennessey and Martin Rotchford and Produced by Jack Kavanagh.

LOGLINE

A supernatural chiller that tells the story of a disbeliever Mick and his encounter with the unruly Faerie folk.

SYNOPSIS

Mick insults the proprietor of his local tavern after overhearing the fireside faerie tales. Drunk, he is cast out of the pub but follows a strange woman through the countryside. Brought into the faerie world Mick battles with his senses to determine what is real and what is not and more importantly, try to escape
